About This Text

This dictionary consists of four sections: the first with terms arranged by their common roots; the second a list only of root words, prepositions, and other basic terms; the third a list of words possible under Paklikale's phonological constraints, and finally a list of countries, territories, and capital cities in Paklikale. As of this writing, the language has a vocabulary of over 4,500 terms, including over 1,100 distinct roots.

While the meanings of these roots are fixed, the compound words listed in this dictionary should largely be taken more as suggested methods of word building, at most as default versions or baseline examples, rather than as rigid definitions. The spirit of the language encourages compounds to be developed in any intuitive way.

English terms are bolded for clarity. The definition of a term in italics indicates its function rather than its meaning. Such an entry might appear as "adjective suffix klo," showing that klo is an adjective suffix, not that it means "adjective suffix." An apostrophe at the end of a word indicates its suffix was omitted. By default, the suffixes for roots are left out as such, and those terms can be assumed nouns unless otherwise noted. Apostrophes also may indicate abbreviations. Where these appear in the dictionary, the abbreviated words are given in parentheses. By default, nouns appear in the nominative case and verbs in the indicative mood.

Brackets around a word or part of a word indicate something that is either already part of its meaning in Paklikale or that may be left out without affecting its meaning. For example, the entry "hear, listen [to] japi|sli" indicates that japisli can translate to "hear," "listen," or "listen to." Similarly, in the entry "pitcher (vessel) [jo|]jislo|flibo|pla," the prefix jo may be left out without changing the meaning of the word. Footnotes indicate more detailed explanations or examples, and, as alluded to above, parentheses surround information that clarifies the meaning of a term. Slashes separate terms that are equivalent as far as Paklikale is concerned or that are equally valid options. In one entry, the English terms "good afternoon/day/evening/morning/night" are joined in this way as Paklikale does not distinguish between phrases like "good afternoon" and "good morning," and regarding Paklikale terms themselves, an entry like “bottom, periphery no/ko|slelo|pla” indicates that both “no|slelo|pla” and “ko|slelo|pla” are equally acceptable variations.

The following abbreviations appear with an entry to show what it is, its part of speech (when its part of speech is ambiguous), or its etymology. They are found after whatever term they describe.

Dictionary Grouped by Root

This section is a complete dictionary with terms arranged by their common root, indented underneath it, to illustrate how roots may be used to form new words. The ones formed by multiple roots appear in alphabetical order at the end of the entry, with any terms derived from them indented again. See the sample entry below:

List of Possible Words

This section lists most of the terms phonetically viable in Paklikale up to two syllables, 4,878 entries in total. The terms that have already been assigned meanings as of the current version of the dictionary appear in red, while those that are still available appear in black. When the available terms begin to run out, ones with more than two syllables can be created in line with Paklikale's phonological constraints.

The purpose of this section is to provide a reference for creating new root words. As described in the grammar, this should only be done when there is no valid and practical way to express an idea by compounding existing roots (see the Word Building section of the grammar).

Names of Countries and Capitals

The terms Paklikale uses for places are mostly based on their endonyms.²⁵ For those with multiple common or official names, the most universal or the one that transcribes most easily into Paklikale is used (ex. Balet for India). For some names, the Paklikale version is based on the terms from which they derive rather than the names themselves (ex. Enboneso for Indonesia and T'S'-Bios for Saint-Denis). Terms comprising a name are sometimes translated rather than transcribed, though generally only when the name consists of unobscured, directly-translatable terms and when they are easily translated into Paklikale (ex. Kotakible' for N'Djamena, Kotibaklo Nebable' for Porto-Novo, and Tinikjo Klejafipo' Kaboklejo' for Flying Fish Cove) (see the Transcription section of the grammar).

The names of countries and their capitals are listed on the table below in English,²⁶ Paklikale's native script, and Romanized Paklikale. It includes dependant territories as well as sovereign states.
